

Contents

Contributing authors	vii
Preface Steven Pinker	ix
Acknowledgment	xiii
1 Minimising or maximising storage? An introduction Sieb Nooteboom, Fred Weerman, and Frank Wijnen	1
Part I Setting the stage
2 What's in the lexicon? Ray Jackendoff	23
Part II Accessing regular and irregular word forms
3 Dutch inflection: The rules that prove the exception Harald Baayen, Robert Schreuder, Nivja de Jong and Andrea Krott	61
4 Words, rules and stems in the Italian mental lexicon Tessa Say and Harald Clahsen	93

Part III Changing the rules
5
The balance between storage and computation in phonology		133
Geert Booij
6
Computation and storage in language contact		157
Pieter Muysken
Part IV Pronouncing spoken words
7
Storage and computation in spoken word production		183
Ardi Roelofs
Part V Buffering and computing
8
Effects of short-term storage in processing rightward movement		219
Peter Ackema and Ad Neeleman
9
Storage and computation in sentence processing. A neuroimaging perspective		257
Edith Kaan and Laurie Stowe
Part VI Computing and storing aspects of discourse
10
Computation and storage in discourse interpretation		299
Nicholas Asher
Subject Index		329
Author Index		339

Contributing authors

Peter Ackema <P.Ackema@let.uu.nl>
Utrecht Institute of Linguistics OTS (U
Netherlands.

Nicholas Asher <nasher@mail.la.u
Department of Philosophy, The Univers

Harald Baayen <Baayen@mpi.nl>
Interfaculty Research Unit for Language
megen, The Netherlands.

Geert Booij <Booijg@let.vu.nl>
Faculteit der Letteren, Vrije Universiteit

Harald Clahsen <harald@essex.ac.
Department of Linguistics, University of

Ray Jackendoff <jackendoff@binar
Department of Psychology, Brandeis Un

Nivja de Jong <nivja.dejong@mpi.nl>
Interfaculty Research Unit for Language
megen, The Netherlands.

Edith Kaan <Kaan@duke.edu>
Center for Cognitive Neuroscience, Duk